The family of CHADWICK is said to have descended from a Saxon Chieftain, Cedde or Beadde, who, at the time of the Norman Conquest, lived at a place near the borders of Yorkshire and Lancashire named from him Beaddes-wyke Chad's Stronghold - and from which his descendants subsequently took the surname De Bhaddewyk. The main line of the family continued seated in this place until the present century, when it terminated in a sole heiress, Sarah Chadwick, who died unmarried in 1822, when the property passed into the hands of strangers, and the senior representation of the family devolved upon Chadrick of Flealey, Malvesyn-Ridware &c. The Name has in course of time undergone a variety of changes of form and spelling; prior to the 15th Century, beaddewyck, beaddewyk, chaddewyk; from 1445 to 1454, Chadweke, Chadwyk, and Schadweke; from 1454 to 1479 Chadwik, Chadwek, Chadwyke, Chadwic, and Chadwyp; from 1480 to 1515, Chadwike and Chadwyk; from 1520 to 1617, Chadwycke; from 1617 to 1663, Chadwicke; and since that date Chadwick. The writer has been informed of a curious survival of the trisyllabic form: among the United-Empire Loyalists who settled in Canada, when the American States became independent, was a Professor Chadwick; who although spelling his name in the modern form, pronounced it "Chad-e-wick." There are also of the name which appears in the various forms following:- Chaddock, Chadock, Chadioke, Chadiocke, Chediocke, Chedioke, Chidioke, Chideck, Chideock, and Chidiock. These variations of the name are doubtless a mark of cadency distinguishing a junior branch. The name also appears as Chattock, Chattuck and Sedgewick, variously spelled. The antiquity of the ancestral stock and the identity of the arms of the numerous families bearing the names mentioned, evidence the fact that all those families are descendants of a common ancestor.

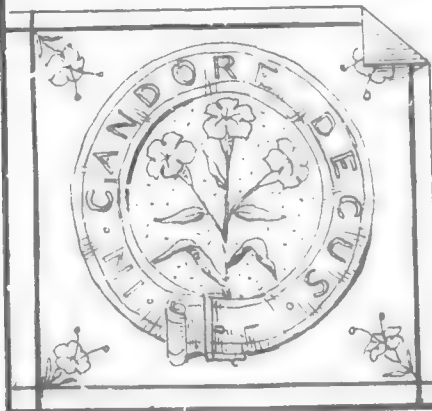

The Arms are the same, with a difference of tincture, as those (or a variety) of the Borough of Rochdale, co. Lancaster. It is said that beards in order to his lands, became a vassal of the (probably Norman De-Rachdale, and in accordance with a well-known heraldic custom, assumed his arms with a distinguishing variance of tincture. The arms of De Rachdale, also called Richdale and Rishdall, are, as were also those of the Borough of Rochdale. Sa. within an orle of eight martlets an inescutcheon, arg.; the ancient arms of Chadwick being precisely the same, in a field gu. instead of sa. The Crest is sometimes a Martlet and sometimes a White Lily or Flag, both being combined in some modern instances. - The White Lily, when not borne as a Crest, may be appropriately used as a Badge. -

The motto is a fragment of Latin Verse, and has a double signification, as the Latin word "bandor" has primarily the meaning:

Note. A recent work, "History of the Parish of Rochdale" discredits the above account, because there is no record of Rochdale having been held by a family of that name, at the same time, admitting the force of the identity of the arms. It is probable that the King's Vassal who held this District may have subsequently assumed the name De Rochdale from the place, previously so called and may have held the lands for but a short time.

+ Bright or Pure

whiteness and secondarily, purity, sincerity or uprightness; so that the motto may be translated "beauty (or honour) in whiteness," with especial reference to the white lily as the emblem of purity, with which idea the white martlets are also consistent, or, "honour in sincerity" (or, uprightness); thus forming in its comprehensive signification, a motto worth endeavouring "to live up to." This motto should always accompany the crest in cases of branches of the family using a second or special motto - the latter to be placed beneath the shield.

The name and arms being both of about the same date, it follows that all persons who bear the name, in any of its forms, by inheritance, are entitled to bear the arms. In cases where junior branches have not had any difference the arms are the Auncient Coat - gu. within an orle of eight martlets, an inescutcheon arg. (as shown in the initial letter on the first page above). - Crest, a white lily, slipped, stemmed and leaved, pro. with the motto above described.

These arms however, should be distinguished by at least some mark of cadency.

 an inferior quality and has long can be no doubt as to what it was origin-mentioned in the grant, but the Cooper-Chadwicks are of course, entitled to bear the general family motto. They have sometimes used the motto, non cum rege, but erroneously, as that is peculiar to Chadwick of Healey and Mavesyn-Ridware. -

On the special grant of arms to Richard and Catherine Cooper-Chadwick a question arises as to the rights of the issue of the second marriage of Richard Cooper-Chadwick. The grant, clear enough for its immediate purpose, has been rendered ambiguous by subsequent events. The writer is not aware of its construction having been at any time officially determined. In the absence of any such official dictum, the question is, whether it is to be construed 1, Strictly, as to Richard and Catherine and their joint heirs, or 2 Freely, as to them and their heirs respectively, or severally. In the latter case the younger sons of Richard would bear the arms thereby granted; in the former they would (in the writer's opinion, at least) be entitled only to Richard's inherited arms of Cooper; but no doubt, on application, they would be authorised to bear the arms as in the grant, but reversing

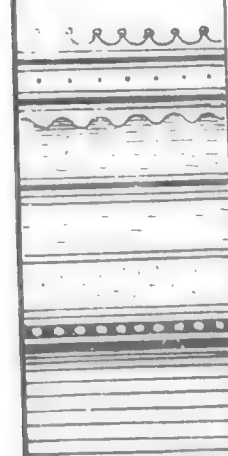

The order of marshalling, and placing the arms of Cooper in the first and fourth quarters, and those of Chadwick in the second and third. — As the arms of Chadwick in this grant differ widely from the paternal arms, so also do those of Cooper which bear no resemblance to the arms of Cooper of Hildenure, which are, sa. a chevron wavy erm. between three lions rampant, or. * Crest, on a chapeau, gu. turned up erm. a bull passant pro. collared and hooped or. The following genealogy of the Irish branch of the Chadwick family was compiled by Mrs. Letitia Chadwick of Dunmore and Edward Marion Chadwick of Toronto, and is believed to be quite correct, (except as to anything which is stated in the text to be uncertain) in all statements regarding the main line of descent; but the particulars of junior or cadet branches are not so reliable and may contain errors or inaccuracies. A good deal of difficulty was found in tracing this genealogy in consequence of the carelessness with which parochial records have been kept: those of Cullen are since 1779 only, the registers prior to that date having Disappeared - at least they are not at Cullen, nor at Waterford. * Little use has been made of parochial registers or other public sources of information, as the compilers have not had an opportunity of making such searches beyond a limited extent. No doubt a professional genealogist could add much to this work. It may also be noted that the family title deeds were lost about 1840 to 1844 having been entrusted to an attorney in London with a view to prosecuting a claim to the supposed vast estates of Sir Andrew Chadwick and were never recovered - probably in consequence of the death of Austin Cooper Chadwick and John Chadwick of Dublin, who were concerned in the business. Like all Chadwicks,

* Note. It is possible that they may be at Dublin.

The Ballinard family long fancied that they were the true heirs of Sir Andrew Chadwick, but the enquiries made in tracing this genealogy have pretty plainly demonstrated that none of our Ancestors were related to Sir Andrew Chadwick,* whose relations and heirs are now well known, though for a long period a good deal of doubt and mystery existed with regard to them.

*Note. Sir Andrew Chadwick of Larker Place in the Manor of Accrington co. Lancaster, and afterwards of St. James' Westminster, was knighted by Queen Anne 18. June 1709/10. - D. in 1768, said to be aged 90. - In his early life he lived for a time in Ireland. He was an Army Agent and Paymaster, and acquired great wealth which was the subject of an immense amount of litigation extending over many years. Our family never had any right to any of it.

H Descent of the + IRISH, or Ballinard Branch of the Chadwick Family is stated in the old Drawing of the arms already referred to, to have been derived from "an ancient and worthy family out of Yorkshire in England." - The first settler in Ireland is said to have been a gentleman of good position in England, who in consequence of some political or family disagreement, sold his estates there, and acquired Ballinard, or Ballynard, in co. Tipperary, sometimes described as in co. Limerick. The circumstance

That

the alliances of the family have been apparently with the families of the Cromwellian Settlement chiefly, seem to indicate that the Chadwicks came into Ireland at about the time of this immigration, and perhaps under Cromwellian auspices. For it is a fact which may be observed on a study of genealogies of families in the South of Ireland, that those who came into the Country at this period have constantly inter-married with one another, generally holding aloof from those of a previous immigration, who again have similarly kept much within their own circle, and both avoiding alliances with the Celtic families. "Ballinard, co. Limerick," was about or shortly before the middle of the 17th Century, the property of Garrett Fitzgerald, and as it was about this time that the downfall of the Geraldines occurred, it is probable that the

Ballinard

referred to may be the same as that of the Lhadowicks, and was acquired by them about 1650 to 1660, which would be also the date of their settlement in Ireland. There has long been a family tradition that the first Hler in Ireland married a ward in Chancery named Grace Loggin (or some similar name) and failing to obtain the consent of the Lord Chancellor to the marriage, escaped out of England with his wife concealed in a sack. While it is impossible to say how far this story may be correct, it is most likely that it is founded on fact for so remarkable a story could scarcely have arisen without a foundation. The writer inclines to the opinion that this Ancestor was the one whose name is on the stone cover of the family burial vault at

Rough sketch of the slab covering the vault at Gullston. The letters are in relief running between, & other lines also in relief. The inscription is at one end, as if for the first interment, leaving space for subsequent inscriptions to be added. The dates seem to have been chiselled off. The style of lettering is:-

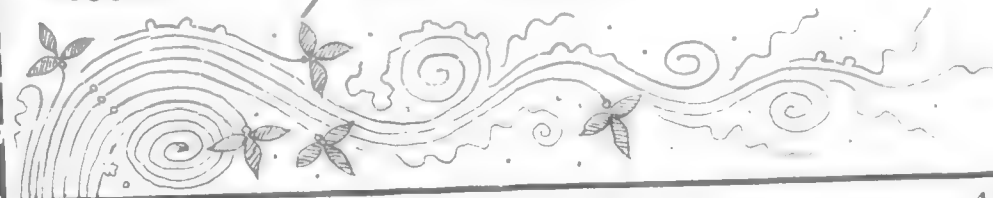

HE · WthCH

Casser

with the date of death obliterated, because the Will of Richard Chadwick, qui ob 1720-21 directs the vault to be repaired from which it is clear that it must have been already a good while in existence. So that if the first settler in the land died, as is probable, about 1680, the Vault would no doubt date from that time, and being in 1720 some forty years old, might easily require repairs. If this be so, the name of the first settler was William and beginning with him the descent may be traced as follows: ~~~~ i.

William (?) Chadwick
m. as is supposed, Grace Goggin, and had issue two sons, viz: (but it is not known if these were the only children). - ii.

1. Richard, of Ballinard.

before March 1721. His Will leaves Ballinard and Ballinglanna, the adjoining Estate, to his nephew William and grand nephews Richard, William, Rodolph and Michael, in successive remainders, and a legacy to his niece Grace. - originally Garbett) of Caherline, co. Limerick (who d. 1693) and Alicia his wife, dau. of Richard England of Lifford co. Clare. This may be the William "of 1673" who is mentioned in an old letter, and is stated to have been buried at Cullen in 1739. He had issue a son and a daughter (as is supposed, but it is possible that she may have been the dau. of a brother) viz:-

1. William, of Gurthakilleen, near Oola, co. Limerick, of whom in the male line, but represented in the female line by the family of Perose of co. Galway.

quently m. to Anthony Armstrong.
Richard's will is dated 1769 or 1770, but he lived longer, as one of his sons was born in 1771, and he was probably not the youngest.
He had issue as follows:

implied. It has two swords, a saltire (points in chief) it is not known

Of his first marriage:

v.

1. William nicknamed "Billy Snug," b. 1743 (or 1741) of whom below. †
2. Richard nicknamed "Parson Dick," born 1751. In Holy Orders, Rector of Doone, co. Tipperary, and Kilvernon, M. Margaret Sadlier and had issue - see page 37. He d. May 1817.
3. Thomas, of Barnascounce, b. 1752, d. July 1812. m. Sarah Lockwood (who d. February 1826 and had issue - see page 34.
4. James, an Officer in the Army? He m. the dau. of a Pennsylvanian Planter, and had issue - see page 44.
5. Frederick, of Littleton and Cullen, m. Susannah Minchin and had issue - see page 42.

Note! It is uncertain whether Richard or Thomas above named was the elder. 22

6. A dau. m. to William Minchin of Greenhills, and had issue, one dau. And of the second marriage.

7. Nicholas, nicknamed "Pooy", b. 1771: d. January 1854 His wife d. May 1826. He had two sons, vi- William and Michael of whom the latter was living in Tipperary in 1879, aged 75.

8. Michael m. an heiress. Lived in Wales and subsequently in Jersey, and had issue.

Note: The two lives of Richard and his son Nicholas from the birth of the former to the death of the latter stretched over a period of 140 years or more, and the grandson of a man born in 1714, or possibly earlier, was still living in 1879 - 165 years - the latter has lived in the presence of certainly five generations (of which the last has a number of adult members) and probably of six as it is likely that his grandmother was living when he was born. Some of her brothers and sisters certainly were so.

William "Belly. Inu." m

He had issue of the 1st marriage only, namely:

Note! There are some old silver cups at Ballinard on which are engraved the arms of Rose Craven (née Olway) arranged as those of a Widow. A portrait in the possession of the writer has been supposed to be hers but Mr. Bryan states that it is a portrait of Mrs. John Gorden (née Rose) a horse shown in the background being Barnane, and that a portrait at Ballinard of a fair-haired lady, dressed in red is that of Rose Craven.

Note. It will be observed that the death of Richard above named caused the only interruption which has taken place in the continuous alternate succession of Williams and Richards at Ballinard.

Others of the Name — in Canada —

Besides the family to which this work relates, there are, or have been, others of the name in Canada.

The U. E. Loyalist Prof. Chadwick, named on Page 2 left no descendants so far as the writer is aware. — His sister was married to O'Reilly of Hamilton, and was mother (? grand-mother) of the late D^r O'Reilly, Inspector of Prisons and Asylums.

The Chadwicks of co. Norfolk, C. one of whom is the well-known Charles Ely Chadwick, Police Magistrate, of Ingersoll, are the descendants of Eli Chadwick who came to Canada in 1826 from Preston, co. Lancaster E.

A respectable family of yeomen of the name came from Macclesfield (and previously from co. Stafford E.) in 1830 and settled in or near Toronto

The immigrant John Chadwick, died in 1847. His son John C. settled in Artemesia, co: Iprey, and died there in 1879. One of this family Rupert C. is said to have settled in Manitoba and others of them are living in South Africa.

The name occurs at Rat Portage in Keewatin, C. W. Chadwick is President of the Board of Trade there. -

There is, or was, a William Chadwick living at Lilket in British Columbia, whose wife was a Miss Eastwood of Toronto. His sister, a school teacher was until lately living in Toronto. They came from Leeds, co: York. E.

There is also a family of the name in Montreal, of which is Stanley M. Chadwick who lived for some time in Toronto.
